Many Cotton Dress Contests Are Held

Arkansas Rural Women Show Interest in National Event

Rural women of Arkansas have indicated their interest in National Cotton Week by conducting cotton dress contests over the state, under the supervision of county home demonstration agents and through the cooperation of Miss Rosalie Wolfe, extension specialist in clothing and household arts.

Five county contests have already held such contests and more than 30 counties have such events scheduled for June and July. These will culminate in state dress contests during annual "Farmers Week" August 4 to 7, at the University of Arkansas. The contests promote wider use of cotton fabrics and improved dresses, which results in an increased interest in sun-fast, tubfast fabrics, Miss Wolfe points out.

Lincoln County Home Demonstration Club women held a house dress contest and children's dress contest recently. Twenty-two house dresses made of prints, Indian head, gingham, etc., were entered. Six dresses for little girls, of small figured prints were modeled by the children. These were designed especially for school and play. Miss Mary Booth, home demonstration agent in Cleveland county, gave demonstrations in selection of fabrics, design and construction during the year in preparation for the contests.

"The rural woman is alive to the fact that cotton fabrics can be used to clothe the entire family during the summer months and in a large measure throughout the year. These fabrics are durable and within the clothing allowance of 15 per cent of the total income for the year. A family can be well dressed for every occasion when cotton fabrics are selected. New and interesting fabrics are adapted to a wider variety of uses. Cable net and cotton net are especially suited to use for the waist of a child's sun suit. Cotton mesh in both dress and underwear types are very attractive in tailored sport dresses. Cotton tweeds and ratine are most adapted to use as suits for church, street and travel wear. Shadow print and embroidered organdies make lovely, dainty afternoon frocks for the slender figure. All over embroideries and batiste lend themselves to smart frocks for the larger, shorter figure for afternoon affairs.

"Cotton fabrics have never been smarter. Every woman will find a fabric for every occasion and can be as correctly as well as economically dressed this summer and throughout the year. Rural women invite her city neighbors to wear dainty cotton frocks and thus spread the use of cotton."

Citizens of Roe Want Rail Station Restored

ROE, Ark.—In response to a petition which was signed by a large number of citizens of Roe, a hearing in regard to the restoration of the railway station at this place has been announced for Thursday, June 4. The meeting will be held at the Hotel Rusher in Brinkley at 10 a. m.

The Roe station was discontinued two weeks ago, along with other small stations along the Cotton Belt railroad. Roe had a telegraph, express and ticket office here for more than 40 years. P. A. 10,000 Hungry Bugs Imported From Peru To Save Sugar Cane

NEW YORK.—(AP)—Ten thousand bugs, with big appetites for a certain parasite that destroys Louisiana sugar cane, have arrived in New Orleans, after a 4,000-mile trip by air and rail from Lima, Peru.

They traveled in 10 containers in an air liner from Peru to Miami, where they were given rations and put aboard a train for New Orleans. On their arrival in Louisiana they were deployed along a 10-mile front. Reinforcements will be brought up from Peru as needed.

Most of the insects that destroy sugar cane parasites are found in South America, and these, a particularly virulent type, were recruited in a certain valley in the Peruvian Andes.

Missouri Pacific In Cotton Survey

L. W. Baldwin Announces Plan to Extend Use of Product Along Lines

ATLANTA.—(AP)—Cason J. Callaway, La Grange, Ga., president of the American Cotton Manufacturers Association, said here Wednesday reports from various co-operating agencies indicated the first half of the National Cotton Week celebration has proved successful.

The story of cotton and its 932 uses, he said, has been told widely in newspaper advertisements, news stories, radio talks, displays and through other mediums.

A survey of leading newspapers, he said, disclosed that 279 separate cotton items so far have been advertised this week. The report was made to him by the Cotton Textile Institute of New York, leading participant in the week's celebration.

Advance estimates that approximately 500 miles of store windows throughout the nation would be used for "cotton displays" he said, were believed to have been borne out. Leading department stores of Georgia, T. M. Forbes, secretary of the Cotton Manufacturers Association of Georgia said today, have reported increases as high as three times the normal in cotton goods sales as a result of the merchandising campaigns in connection with the week.

A Georgia division of the National Association for Increased Use of Cotton was organized here Wednesday.

Kentucky Colonel Ready For Parade

Col. Redd Perhaps Will Be Only Mounted Veteran at Reunion

MONTGOMERY, Ala.—(AP)—A Kentucky colonel who almost lost his steed when he ran out of funds at the Confederate reunion at Little Rock, Ark., three years ago, is impatiently awaiting the command "forward march" that will start the annual parade of veterans Friday.

Col. Richard M. Redd, Lexington, Ky., probably will be the only mounted veteran in the parade, feature of the forty-first reunion in progress here. Two years ago at Charlotte, N. C., an entire section was assigned to the aged veterans and his horse, "Major," and the crowds that thronged the line of march were thrilled by Colonel Redd's rebel yells and Major's fiery prancing.

The picturesque Kentuckian was ill and unable to attend last year's reunion at Bloxi, Miss., but now he is in Montgomery in full regalia with his chestnut steed ready to assume the spotlight again Friday. The colonel and "Major," already popular here, have a following of small Stephens wherever they halt in Camp Stephens park. Three years ago at Little Rock Colonel Redd found that he had just enough money left to return to Lexington alone. With tears in his eyes, he bade farewell to his four-footed companion on the station platform, and asked the assembled crowd of anyone would take care of "Major." Immediately a public subscription was begun to furnish "Major's" transportation.

But Colonel Redd was forced to get on the train before the details of the horse's shipment were arranged. The veteran, who is pastor of a country Presbyterian church in private life, left with the admonition not to ship "Major" the next day, which was Sunday.

When Lexington friends learned of "Major's" plight, they too started a subscription, and when "Major" finally arrived in Lexington he had a nice sum in addition to freight charges. So Colonel Redd put it in the bank to "Major's" account, and used it to ship the horse to Charlotte the next year.

No one has ever determined how old Colonel Redd is. He will give no information on that subject, but he is believed to be near 90. He is tall, straight and unimpaired. When not engaged in church work at Lexington, he is leading parades astride "Major" or attending other public functions in uniform.

Lieut. Gov. Wilson Is Denounced by Press

Arkansas Newspapers Rap Him For Using Office to Save His Brother

Lieutenant Governor Wilson's action in pardoning his brother, Fred Wilson, while acting governor last Monday, has drawn the sharpest censure from the newspapers of Arkansas. The Star finds the following comment in the editorial columns of its contemporaries:

A Strange Anomaly
If the presiding judge of a federal state of municipal court has before him a defendant who is among his kin, it is customary for the jurist to step down, surrender his power to another and allow justice administered without the handicap of blood relation between the judge and the defendant, or plaintiff.

But if the question of a pardon arises and the convicted person is a relative of the chief executive, we find that no such custom prevails. Certainly, it did not prevail in the case of Lieutenant Governor Lawrence E. Wilson, acting chief executive during the absence of Governor Parnell, and his brother, Fred Wilson, who had been convicted on each of four counts of embezzlement.

The lieutenant governor is quoted as saying that he had no apologies to make, that sympathy for his grief-stricken and aged mother was the inspiration for granting the pardon. And certainly, it would seem a strange sort of man who would resist such a temptation.

But what of the thousands of men, who have been sent to prison leaving "grief-stricken and aged mothers" behind? Why should they pay because they did not have the good fortune to be the brother of an executive?

The incident makes plain that the blood relationship should at all times bar a chief executive from the right to pardon any person whom the court have convicted. If such is not the law it should be. History may relate many instances where fathers have sent their sons to death, as the law demanded, and brothers have condemned brothers to prison sentences, but

Man Threatens Farmer, Is Shot

Wounds May Prove Fatal to Independence Countian

BATESVILLE.—John Barnes, aged 25, resident of the Cushman community, 10 miles north of here, is in a serious condition in a local hospital as a result of being shot by Hugh Dodson, aged 42, also a Cushman resident and prominent farmer.

Trouble between the two started two weeks ago when Dodson is said to have warned Barnes about bringing whiskey to Dodson's place. Witnesses state Barnes threatened to "get" Dodson and last Saturday Barnes met Dodson and, according to witnesses, again threatened to "get" Dodson.

Dodson followed him from the scene of the trial and fired three times with an automatic pistol each shot taking effect, two in the abdomen and the other in the hip. Dodson is out of the hospital pending the outcome of Barnes' injuries.

Independence county officers state that Barnes has been known for a long time as a dangerous character. He was tried last year for the murder of his father-in-law, J. P. Barnes, near Cushman. He was cleared. He has been arrested numerous times on whiskey and assault charges.

King Hussein Dies in Palestine

Aged Hero of Arab Revolt Was Man Who Broke the Turks

AIDED THE ALLIES

Fighting Irishman Planted Seed of Revolt in the King's Heart

JERUSALEM, Palestine.—(AP)—The most romantic figure in the Arab revolt against Turkey during the World war, died at Amman Thursday after a long illness.

He was 75 years old.

Lawrence of Arabia played a prominent part in the revolt, working with Hussein upon Palestine, now Iraq. Hussein was the catalyst in the Pan-Arab movement which sought to include Palestine in the creation of Arab states under his rule.

Readers of The Star will recall the thrilling history of Lawrence of Arabia, which appeared in a series of United Press dispatches last month, telling of Lawrence's intimate political dealings with King Hussein.

Major Lawrence, now known simply as Aircraftman Shaw in the British Royal Flying Corps, was an adventurous Irishman, who single-handedly went into the desert in the perilous days of 1916 and fomented rebellion among the Arabs against the Turks.

His alliance with King Hussein enabled him to threaten the Turks in the rear, and paved the way for the victorious march of General Allenby and his British regulars from Egypt into Jerusalem.

Today these romantic figures have moved into oblivion. King Hussein is dead. Major Lawrence voluntarily took a private position in the British army rather than cope with the intrigue of official life. But the memory of their famous plot against the Turks is enshrined upon the pages of history.

Injuries In Auto Accident Fatal

G. W. Baker of Shreveport, Dies at Arkadelphia Hospital

George W. Baker, Jr., aged about 26, furniture dealer of Shreveport, La., died at a hospital in Arkadelphia early Wednesday morning as a result of injuries received in an automobile accident. On last Friday the automobile in which the young man was with him and two other Shreveport men overturned on a highway a few miles west of Arkadelphia. The accident occurred when a tire blew out causing the car to leave the highway.

Mr. Baker at the time of the accident was not thought to have been seriously injured and was left in Arkadelphia, by the party to return to Shreveport. It was found later however that he was suffering from internal injuries.

The youth's mother arrived in Arkadelphia on Monday afternoon, and was with him at his death. She suffered a complete collapse and en route to Shreveport was brought as far as this city in a McDaniel, Murray and Lee ambulance.

From here Mrs. Baker was taken to her home in Shreveport in the Hope Furniture Company ambulance. The body of her son was also taken overland by Hope Furniture Co.

He is survived by his parents and one sister.

Danger of Being Bored

THE greatest danger that confronts civilized man these days is the danger of being bored. So says Dr. Louis J. Karnosh, psychiatrist at Western Reserve University, who finds that the mechanized life of the modern world has made nervousness almost a universal complaint.

Because of the machines that man has built to do his work for him, says Dr. Karnosh, he finds himself too often with no adequate outlet for his emotions and her energies. He is too safe, his wants are too easily satisfied. As the psychiatrist remarks:

"To have a rich vitality and have nothing to apply it to; to have no drive, need, never to miss or never to have the opportunity to yearn, is the worst form of emotional anemia and starvation. There is no luster to life, no uncertainty, no adventure around the corner."

Made too secure by the perfection of our mechanical contrivances, we try to find, in poor substitutes, the excitement that our ancestors found in direct action. We turn to novels for the thrill that the savage gets out of the hunt, we go to the movies for the excitement that our early ancestors found in war, and we make the baseball game, the prize fight or the automobile ride take the place of the healthy fears and desires of primitive man; and, all in all, it is not in the least good for us.

Thus, says Dr. Karnosh, we live under a nervous strain. The sameness of the daily routine, the monotony of the mechanized job, are driving us almost to distraction. We are rapidly losing our mental health because—in the strictly material sense—we have become too civilized.

No man who has lived in the modern world will question this psychiatrist's conclusions. Thinkers have been crying the dangers of the mechanical era for a decade. The great question today is, What are we going to do about it?

The chief thing, probably, is to reduce the amount of work that each man has to do. The shorter working day, seen from this angle, is not merely a pleasant dream of the labor organizer; it is a pressing necessity, both for the manual worker and for the office employee. If we are to retain the old zest in life, the old feeling of satisfaction and happiness, we must radically cut down the time that each man has to give to his job. There is no other way out.

A mechanized era can do great things for the race. It can set men free, can enable them to rove widely and devote long hours to lazy enjoyment of the pleasures of the moment. But it will not do those things unless we listen to men like Dr. Karnosh, and realize that our present method of approach is all wrong.

Privacy Passes On

PEOPLE can't live to themselves today. Not with society the complex organization that it is. If a certain man's house is needed for the general welfare of the group the house must go.

Margaret Reiley's experience at Thorndike, N. Y., the other day is proof of this. Miss Reiley, who is 63, had spent most of her life in a nice little cottage with a row of purple lilac bushes blooming 'round the door. She took root there. It was home.

The house, as it happened, stood on property condemned for use in connection with the extension of a river parkway. A generous amount of money was offered for it. But the woman wouldn't vacate. For three months she repulsed engineers and deputy sheriffs who tried to make her leave. Finally a police matron, on the pretext that she wanted to buy some lilacs, succeeded in bringing Miss Reiley to the door, where she was promptly seized and spirited away.

Individual happiness has to yield to the common good if we are going to progress. It is quite right that it should. But it is hard on the one who makes the sacrifice.

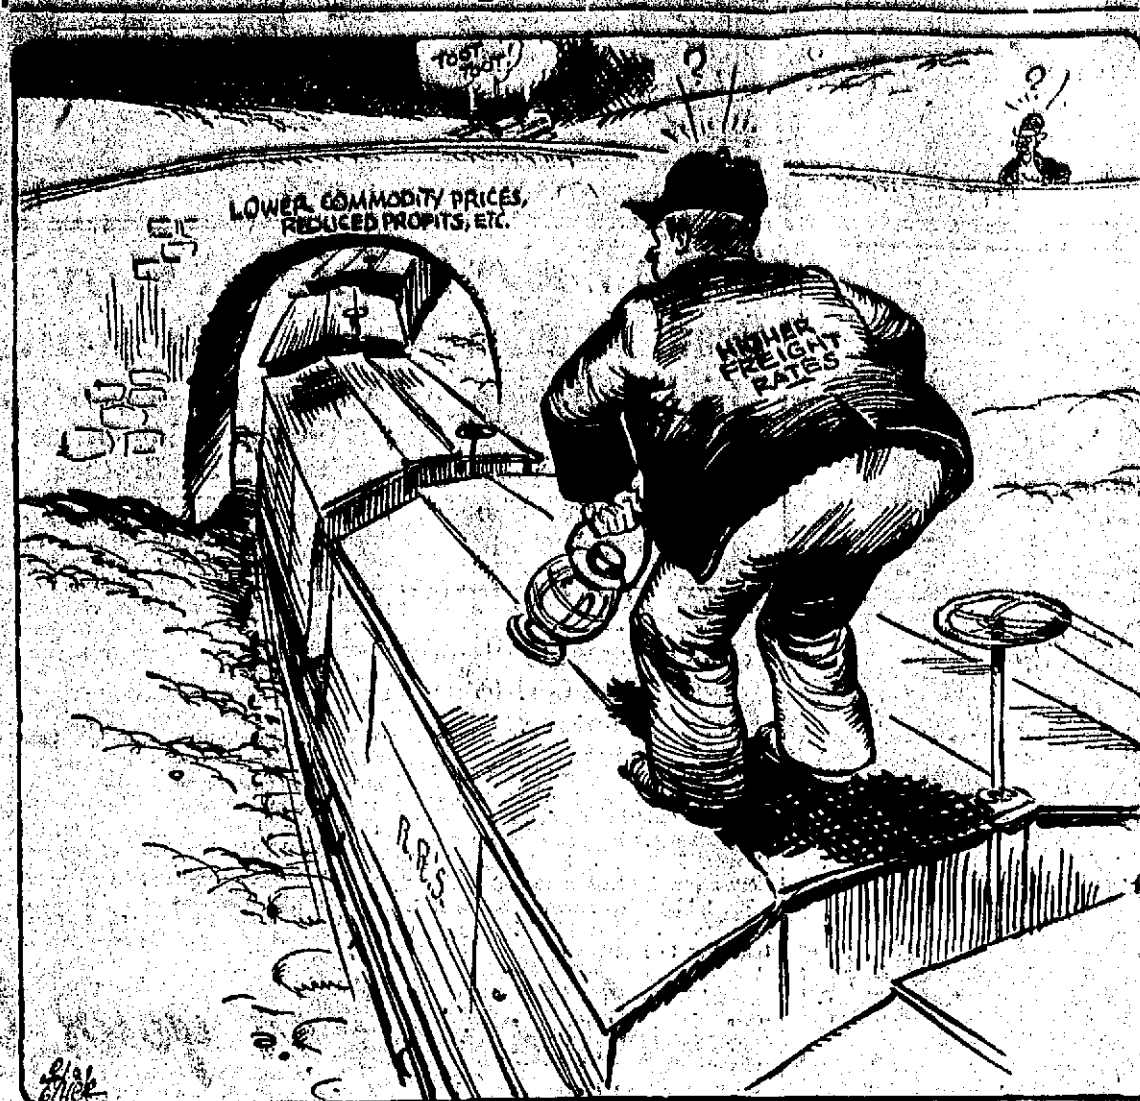

Miss Reiley had never been in an automobile, it is thought, until she was driven away from her house. She had limited her interests. Her uprooting was doubly hard because of this. If she had possessed a community of interests and had various channels into which to conduct her thoughts she might not have minded the moving process. She could have taken her interests with her. Narrowing one's horizon is never wise.

The modern crush of living hasn't much time to bother with the sentimental associations of places. In order to promote the community welfare it must tear down a roof or two along the way and dig up some flower bushes. Miss Reiley was being treated much better than she realized.

A home and a house are different things. You can carry your home along when you move. The house is just the location of the home. But still, when a woman is 63, and has centered her life in one spot, it is hard to learn how to scrub another kitchen floor, or what to do for a new sink when the drains won't work. Sometimes it takes a heap of living in a home to understand its eccentricities.

"Home Sweet Home," which told of the particular charms of one abiding place, is oddly at variance with the modern progress. "Where are you living now?" is the catch question of the 20th century housing question.

Low Bridge! Can He Make It?

Washington Letter

BY RODNEY DUTCHER
 NEA Service Writer

WASHINGTON.—Instead of becoming that "model city" in law enforcement promised by President Hoover, Washington insists on remaining a typical American community with an underworld, crime waves, racket murders, corruption and other phases of municipal life which keep police reporters skiny.

Washington is now having more murders in proportion to population than Chicago.

Thus far this year we have averaged 6.4 murders a month, which is an annual rate of one murder per 7500 of population. Latest available studies of homicides in American cities cover 1929 and show Chicago had a murder rate per 100,000 population was 10.1 for the larger American cities and 11.3 for Chicago. The nation's capital, plunging along now at a rate of 6.5 murders for 1931, is setting a mark of 13.3 per 100,000.

Public Aroused.

The surprising way people get killed off here, so frequently and so publicly, and the extent to which the police turn out to be involved in crime has everybody all stirred up again after a crime wave in which 10 persons were shot within a few days, nearly all fatally.

One suggestion is that the situation could be cleaned up by putting all cops in jail at once, but it might be difficult to catch them. Perhaps a more effective method would be for all good citizens to start biting bandits and crooks, as suggested by Senor Carlos Leiva, the Salvadoran charge d'affaires, who implored police protection for legation liquor and then was badly beaten up by thieves whom he found looting it.

Leiva lies in a hospital with a fractured skull, boasting that he bit a bandit's finger "to the bone" and that such bites "often prove poisonous." He says the Washington police are the worst in the world and that a few good poisonous biters would be more efficient in guarding the embassies and legations.

One of the latest murders, that of a police stool pigeon, has turned up a policeman who has been hitting just as the Ben-Lah Limerick murder found a cop who was operating whisky stills in his basement. Sixty-three cops have been fired from the force for misconduct in the last two years.

Only three persons in the District of Columbia have permits to carry pistols, but 3304 have been sold here in the past 12 months and twice as many are estimated to have been shipped in by mail or express. One newspaper has just printed a police map which purports to show 667 known speakeasies, 153 gambling houses and 40 disorderly houses.

Hoover is Maying up that in their office, President Hoover acts as mayor, though, of course, he has no right to other territory to think of it was Hoover who decided Washington should become a model town and set a good example to all other cities. So he appointed Major General Herbert B. Crosby, chief of cavalry, as one of the three district commissioners apparently expecting Crosby to clean up the town.

Nobody can vote here, so the citizens have to take what they get from Congress, the president and the police. Theoretically, the police force is clean and free from graft, untouched by influence because there are no municipal politics; and the city is free of aliens, who are supposed to be such a crime problem in other big cities. The only aliens are in embassies and legations. Thanks to them, this is the one community where policemen are charged with guarding liquor supplies and where the government has to make good if liquor is stolen. The Leiva case raised the question whether the State Department would have to indemnify a legation in actual liquor or its value in cash.

End Piles Quick

No Salves—No Cutting

Your itching, bleeding, protruding piles will go when you actually remove the cause—bad blood circulation in the weak, flabby parts—and not one minute before. Salves or cutting can't do this—an internal remedy must be used. HEM-ROID, prescription of Dr. J. S. Leonhardt, succeeds because it stimulates the circulation, drives out congested blood, heals and restores the almost dead parts. HEM-ROID has such a wonderful record right in this city, that Ward & Son say one bottle of HEM-ROID Tablets must end your Pile agony or money back. Adv.

What constitutes a state?
Not high-raised battlement or labored mound,
Thick walls or moated gate;
Not cities proud with spires and towers crowned;
Not bays and broad-armed ports.
Where, laughing at the storm, rich navies ride;
Not starred and spangled courts,
Where low-browed business wits perfume to pride.
No—men, high-minded men,
With powers as far above dull brutes ended
In forest, brake or den,
As beasts excel cold rocks and brambles rude—
Men who their duties know,
But know their rights, and, knowing, dare maintain,
Prevent the long-aimed blow,
And crush the tyrant while they rend the chain;
These constitute a state.

The Cemetery Association will hold their regular monthly meeting on Friday afternoon at 3 o'clock, in the council room at the city hall. All members are urged to attend.

Miss Denelda Dodson has returned from a short visit with friends and relatives in Little Rock.

Charming in every detail, was the beautiful bride party, given by Mrs. Finley ward in Wednesday afternoon, at her home on South Pine street, as special compliment to Mrs. Roy Stephenson, an early spring bride. The rooms throughout were decorated with baskets and vases of lovely sweet peas, in the pastel shades, with pink and green color scheme predominating, and were matched by the dainty score cards used in the game. Greeting the guests, were Mrs. Ward, Mrs. Stephenson, Mrs. W. B. Lee of Maylene, Mrs. B. B. Brown of Baton Rouge, La., and Mrs. Ruffin Boyett of Little Rock. The attractive trophies given after the game, went to Mrs. Robert Campbell, Mrs. W. H. Hutchinson, and dainty gifts of remembrance were given to Mrs. Stephenson, Mrs. Lee, Mrs. Brown and Mrs. Boyett. The chosen color scheme was beautifully emphasized in the tempting salad plate served at the close of the game. Mrs. Ward was assisted in catering for her guests by her young son, Robert.

Miss Charlotte Stuart of Arkadelphia is making an extended visit with her grand parents, Mr. and Mrs. K. G. McRae Sr.

David Ruffin Boyett of Little Rock is the house guest of his grand parents, Capt. and Mrs. R. A. Boyett.

George Emory, son of Mrs. Brooke Ellyson, returned last night from Fort Smith where he attended Sudano college for boys this past term. George was a member of this years graduating class.

Miss Allene Horton, who received her Bachelor of Music degree in piano at Lindenwood College, St. Charles, Mo., arrived Tuesday morning to spend the summer vacation visiting with her mother, Mrs. F. S. Horton.

LIEUT.-GOV. WILSON

noys made so free with the pardoning power during the brief period it was vested in them that the Gazette suggested a constitutional amendment restricting the powers of acting governor to exercise executive clemency. It was thought that this abuse would be ended by the constitutional change creating the elective office of lieutenant governor. The Gazette did not anticipate that a time would come when its suggestion of restricting the pardoning power of acting chief executives would have to be renewed. But Lieutenant Governor Wilson has shown the need of such restriction—Arkansas Gazette.

Defeating the Law
Fred Wilson was sentenced to a year in prison Monday at El Dorado on each of four counts in a larceny case, following conviction of theft of $4000 from a lumber company for which he was bookkeeper.

Shortly after the sentence was pronounced, Lieutenant Governor Lawrence E. Wilson, acting as governor in the absence of Governor Farnell, issued a full pardon, the convicted man being his brother.

It is easy to understand why a man would go to the assistance of his brother, but it is not easy to reconcile his action with the oath he took to uphold the law.

If convicted men are to be pardoned before they can be taken to the penitentiary, why should the prosecuting officials and the courts put the state to the trouble and expense of holding trials?

All men are alike, or should be, before the law, and no offender should be accorded clemency merely because of relationship or friendship with the man in whose hands the pardoning power rests.—Arkansas Gazette.

There Are Other Brothers
The pardon issued by Lieut.-Gov. Wilson Monday to his brother before the latter had even been taken to prison under conviction for larceny shocked those who believe in even-handed justice.

Brotherly love, as exemplified by sacrifice is commendable. When a man gives up comfort, money and time to rescue his brother the world applauds. When he risks great danger to save his brother he wins just acclaim. That is, so long as the sacrifice entails sacrifice of something that really belongs to the brother extending the helping hand.

But what Acting Governor Wilson extended to his convicted brother did not belong to him as an individual. It belonged to Arkansas. It was the state's pardoning power handed him by the people in trust.

The thousands of friends and relatives of all the other convicted men and women in Arkansas prisons and jails are wondering today why their particular friends, brothers, sisters, sons, daughters, husbands, or wives didn't receive a pardon from the state through Wilson. Were not they as much entitled to one as the newly convicted brother of the man who temporarily held the state's pardoning power in trust—and misused it in a misguided effort to save his own brother?—Texarkana Press.

How Long Oh! Cataline?
"I have no apologies to make for pardoning my brother. I did it because of my mother," Lieut.-Gov. Wilson is quoted as saying regarding the pardon of Fred Wilson who entered a plea of guilty to embezzling funds in an El Dorado court and was given a sentence of four years in the penitentiary.

Maybe a lot of us would have done the same thing had we been given the opportunity.

But such actions are making a travesty out of the law. If this sort of thing continues we might as well abolish our courts.

There are many men in the penitentiary now serving long hard hours. They are paying their debt to the State for smaller infractions of the law than committed by Fred Wilson.

But they have no brother who is a lieutenant governor who waits until the governor leaves the State to pardon them.

This pardon was issued immediately following the sentence by Judge L. S. Britt and was hurried here before Sheriff Harman started to the penitentiary with his prisoners.

It seems strange that the defendant pleaded for delay in having the sentence imposed until he apparently knew, his brother, the lieutenant governor, would be in power. It has been known for some time Governor Farnell would attend the conference of governors at French Lick Springs in Indiana.

Wilson had asked for a postponement of sentence until the June term of court. He knew and the lieutenant governor knew Farnell would be out of the state at this time. And the result is known.

An admitted embezzler is given a full pardon immediately after his sentence is passed but the chicken thief and the petty offenders go to Little Rock for hard toil.

Justice has been raped. The law has been made a travesty.

If the present legislature should meet again the two pardons, one to a convicted banker and another to a self confessed embezzler before either of them entered the penitentiary gates, should be a subject for investigation.

The latest pardon, that of the lieutenant governor's brother, coming as it did immediately following the court sentence, is a high handed abuse of the pardoning power which power is bestowed upon a governor to exercise with care and discretion, when a mistake has been made and when a person has been sufficiently punished.

The lieutenant governor should resign. Governor Farnell should do as he did during his former term—stay in the State.

Such proceedings as these are making Arkansas a laughing stock in the eyes of the world and at the same time instilling into the minds of our own people a contempt for constituted authority.

How long oh! Cataline?—El Dorado Daily News.

Consider your Adam's Apple!!*
Don't Rasp Your Throat With Harsh Irritants
"Reach for a LUCKY instead"

The great Lord Tennyson in a beautiful poem refers to a woman's Adam's Apple as "The warm white apple of her throat." Consider your Adam's Apple. Touch it—your Adam's Apple—That is your larynx—your voice box—it contains your vocal chords. When you consider your Adam's Apple you are considering your throat—your vocal chords. Protect the delicate tissues within your throat. Be careful in your choice of cigarettes. Don't rasp your throat with harsh irritants! Reach for a LUCKY instead. Here in America LUCKY STRIKE is the only cigarette which brings you the added benefit of the exclusive "TOASTING" Process, which includes the use of modern Ultra Violet Rays. It is this exclusive process that expels certain harsh irritants present in all raw tobaccos. These expelled irritants are sold to manufacturers of chemical compounds. They are not present in your LUCKY STRIKE. And so we say "Consider your Adam's Apple."
